PREPARING FOR CLIMATE CHANGE—RESILIENCE IN HOUSE

In recent years, communities across Brimbank have seen more heatwaves, floods and storms. Some people lose power. Others struggle to access food or get the information they need. We also know that when communities come together, they 'bounce forward' faster. Whether it's helping an elder in a storm or sharing food during tough times, community connection is powerful.

Climate resilience is about strengthening what already works in our community and making a plan together, so we can flourish. In 2025, Kororoit Creek Neighbourhood House worked with our community to listen, learn and prepare for the future. We brought together volunteers, staff and local community members over six workshops to identify practical ideas to build climate resilience.

From all the ideas shared, we have chosen five priority actions to get started. These are the first steps in building a stronger, more connected, and more climate-resilient community:

- Audit our energy and water use to identify practical ways to reduce costs and improve sustainability.
- Advocate for funding to make our Neighbourhood House a cool, safe place during extreme heat.
- Support safer local travel by advocating for streets that are easier to use in hot weather.
- Develop a storage plan for the equipment and supplies needed to support our community during extreme weather.
- Strengthen local partnerships to improve communication, share resources and respond together for community benefit.

Get involved! Want to learn more, or lend a hand? There are lots of different ways you can join us to help. Get in touch with coordinator@ kcnh.org.au
